KILLS GERMS OF CATARRH.

Hyomel Goes to the Root of the Disease and Makes Astonishing Cures.

Catarrh cannot be cured by the use of pills, liquid medicines and so-called system tonics. Under such treatment the germs of the disease still live in the air passages and increase and multiply.

Hyomel is the only scientific and thorough way to cure catarrh. Killing the germs in the air passages, it enters the blood with the oxygen, destroys the microbes in the blood and effectually drives from the system all catarrhal poison.

Probably the strongest evidence that can be offered as to the powers of Hyomel to cure catarrh is the fact that Clarke & Co. will agree to refund the money if you say Hyomel has not cured you.

The complete Hyomel outfit costs but $1.00 and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the vest pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomel. The inhaler lasts a lifetime, and if one bottle does not cure, an extra bottle of Hyomel can be obtained for 50 cents.

Too Tough For Him.

J. F. Cook, proprietor of the Union Stockyards, at Lexington, has just returned from Bonesteel, S. D., where he registered for a land claim on the Sioux reservation, but in which he was unsuccessful. Mr. Cook tells of a harrowing experience he met with while in Bonesteel waiting for an opportunity to get his name on the books. He was held up by thugs and robbed of everything he possessed, including even his railroad ticket. According to the description of Mr. Cook the town is filled with thugs and rowdies, who think nothing of holding a man up in broad daylight on the principal street of the town and taking everything of value he possesses.

After Insurance Agents.

The State authorities will wage relentless war against the system of rebating by insurance companies, and any company that shall hereafter fail or refuse to comply with the requirements will have its franchise to do business in Kentucky forfeited.

State Insurance Commissioner H. R. Prewitt in an interview Wednesday night said: "I am satisfied that rebating is being carried on, and the State Department now proposes to put an end to it. Blank affidavits will be prepared and transmitted to each of the insurance companies doing business in the State, and general as well as local agents will be required to state therein, under oath, that no rebating is being done by them or any of their representatives, and if such affidavit is found to be false or any rebating is done thereafter a prosecution will follow and all franchises will be declared forfeited."

WASHINGTON LETTER

SUMMER-DAY GOSSIP OF THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

EX-SENATOR HENRY G. DAVIS

The Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate Is Well Known and Liked in Washington—New Cabinet Officers—Other Gossip.

Washington.—Of all the men who have places on the national tickets none is better known or better liked locally in Washington than former Senator Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia. Senator Davis for many years has been a familiar figure in the streets of the capital and about the hotels. From his home in West Virginia Washington is the most convenient city of any size and hardly a week passes, winter or summer, without finding him here. His relationship to Senator Gorman and Senator Elkins and his business connections with John R. McLean and other district millionaires have brought him here even more often than would otherwise be the case. Seen in the company of any of these men he does not seem to be their senior, although there is no one of them to whom he cannot show a score of years in retrospect. He has the sturdy form and the springy step of a youngster of 60, and there is not a sign that can be observed of the encroachments of extreme age. An early life on the farm and hard work on the railroad undoubtedly have had much to do with this, and an abstemious life has had more.

With all his millions—and Senator Davis is credited with a fortune ranging all the way from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000 according to the imagination of the chronicler—he has never yet been known to indulge in extravagances of any kind. His tastes are as simple as those of Russell Sage. When he was in the senate and had rooms at the Arlington hotel the members of his family used to make their own dresses and a sewing machine was constantly running in their modest apartments.

Congressional Campaign Open.

The republican and democratic congressional committees are both hard at work here with headquarters established for the sending out of documents during the campaign.

For campaign purposes the congressional committees are chiefly document bureaus and have been ever since they first began to take an active part in electioneering.

Away back in the seventies and the early eighties they had in addition the task of collecting funds from the unfortunate government employees who were expected to contribute a certain percentage of their salaries to the campaign fund of the party which happened to be in power.

Jay Hubbell, of Michigan, became notorious during the campaign of 1880 by his demands upon the government clerks and by the systematic persistence with which he brought them up to the captain's office to settle. Hubbell worked in harmony with the national committee, but he was chairman of the congressional committee and really achieved a reputation which he did not fully deserve.

That was before the days of the civil service regulations, which made the solicitation of campaign funds from government employees unlawful. It has been a good many years since there has been any suggestion of a scandal of the kind. A great many government officials contribute to the campaign funds of their party and their contributions are always welcome, but such a thing as solicitation is no longer known.

Mortons Republican Friends.

Washington is well pleased with the acquisitions to the cabinet which have been made within the last month. Both Secretary Morton and Secretary Metcalf promise to be among the most popular officials in the administration circle. Paul Morton finds a great many friends in Washington whom he used to know well at the time his father was a member of the cabinet of Grover Cleveland. Curiously enough a number of these have followed his own example and have transferred their allegiance from the democratic to the republican party.

One of the first men whom Morton met when he reached Washington was his father's old private secretary in the agricultural department. The young man is no longer in the government service, but is one of the most successful business men in the District of Columbia. Of course Morton was glad to see him and after the first greeting the talk drifted to politics. Pretty soon the former private secretary began to make complimentary remarks about the president. "I didn't know you had changed your politics," remarked the new secretary of the navy. "When did that happen?" "Oh, no, I haven't changed at all," was the reply. "I used to be a J. Sterling Morton democrat. Now I am a Paul Morton republican. It's all in the family."

Morton is going to take a house out on Massachusetts avenue just beyond the splendid mansions of Thomas F. Walsh and Larz Anderson, but a very modest establishment compared with those places and he is counted on to do a good deal of entertaining next winter.

The Third from California.

Victor Metcalf, the new chief of the department of commerce and labor, is enthusiastic over the possibilities of the establishment over which he presides. "It is bound to develop," he says, "into the most efficient and the most important department of the government. It touches almost every line of activity in the United States—the corporations, the laboring men, the miners, the manufacturers. Then it covers the question of immigration, which is bound to be one of the most vital and insistent questions before the American people for a great many years to come—to say nothing of the lighthouses, the coast and geodetic survey, the steamboat inspection service and the bureau of statistics. There is not one of these bureaus which is not destined to expand greatly, with the additional attention which they will all receive from being placed under the jurisdiction of a new department. I had rather be at the head of this department than of any other department in the government."

Metcalf is the third man to be chosen for a place in the cabinet from the Pacific slope since the admission of California. The first was George H. Williams, of Oregon, whom Grant made attorney general and tried to make him chief justice of the United States, but whom the senate refused to confirm as chief justice. Williams was commonly known as Landauet Williams on account of the handsomely upholstered landauet in which Mrs. Williams used to drive about Washington to the envy of less fortunate women. After his retirement no Pacific coast man held a place in the cabinet until McKinley appointed as attorney general Judge McKenna, who served on the ways and means committee with him in the house and who, curiously enough, represented the same district in congress afterwards represented by Mr. Metcalf. McKenna is now a justice of the supreme court.

The subject of economy in printing is one that is bound to come before congress before long in such a way that it will have to be settled. President Roosevelt at the last session of congress brought the matter sharply before the legislative leaders and he also called the various executive departments up with a round turn of the requesting that steps be taken to diminish the constant stream of publications that is steadily flowing from the government printing presses.

The printing bills of the United States are something out of all reason. Documents are turned out by the ton on all sorts of subjects and on every conceivable excuse. To say that three-fourths of this stuff was ever read by anybody would not be perhaps an extravagant estimate. Of course every document is read by somebody, but there are not many that are read by any except a very few. Tons upon tons of printed matter are stowed away or thrown away after year without having been of the slightest benefit to anybody.

Sensors and representatives have learned to use documents in the same way that they use garden seeds from the agricultural department. They bundle them off indiscriminately to constituents whose names happen to be on political lists. Occasionally documents sent out this way reach an appreciable destination. More often they are thrown aside or—if they are bound in boards—transformed into scrap-books.

It is proposed now in some of the departments to put a nominal price on all publications issued so that whenever a document is sent out it will be sure to reach somebody who cares at least enough about it to pay something. Such a policy would not make the document business self-supporting, for the price fixed would be simply nominal, but it would surely tend to lessen the volume of printed material.

Benefited. "Has your son benefited by his stay abroad?" "Yes," answered Mrs. Cumrox. "When he used to say the weather was bad he now says 'the climate is beastly.'"—Washington Star.

Truthful Bessie. Mrs. Tooker—And Bessie must have some tea the same as the rest. Do you take sugar, Bessie? Bessie—Yes'm—when nobody ain't lookin'.—Boston Transcript.

ROOSEVELT NOTIFIED.

Told of Action of Republican National Convention.

He Made a Speech of Acceptance—The Political Campaign of 1904 Was Formally Opened at His Home on Sagamore Hill.

Oyster Bay, L. I., July 28.—Theodore Roosevelt Wednesday formally opened the political campaign of 1904 at his beautiful country home, Sagamore Hill. Standing on a spot made dear to him by the associations of a life time, surrounded by his family and relatives and friends, and in the presence of an assemblage of men distinguished in all walks of life, he formally received and accepted the nomination of the republican party for president of the United States.

President Roosevelt's speech of acceptance was characteristically forceful, and direct in argument and replete with epigrammatic passages. It was received with immense enthusiasm by his auditors. Prosperity may be said to have been the keynote of the address, while the achievements of the republican party in statesmanship at home and abroad were depicted with the touch of a skilled hand.

As the president concluded his speech, Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, chairman of the notification committee, grasped his hand and congratulated him cordially.

The speech of the president will be circulated extensively in the campaign, as, aside from the letter of acceptance, which he will issue in a few weeks, it will be his only public utterance during the campaign.

All of the details of arrangements for the ceremony of notification had been worked out carefully, and from the arrival of the special train from New York with the notification committee abroad, until its departure, not a hitch occurred.

In accordance with the wish of the president the ceremony was made as simple as possible.

The formal notification of the action of the convention was made on behalf of a committee representing every state and territory in the United States, by Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the national house of representatives.

Shortly after noon all of the guests had arrived, but the ceremony of notification did not begin until 12:37 p. m. After some consultation between the president, Speaker Cannon, Chairman Cortelyou and Secretary Loeb, it was decided to hold the exercises on the veranda. The heat was too great to admit of the guests being requested to sit on the lawn. It was found that all the guests could easily assemble on the veranda, within hearing distance of the speakers.

The ceremony was entirely informal. As Speaker Cannon, attired in a dark gray frock suit, stepped up on a chair standing near the veranda railing, he was given a cordial reception.

While Mr. Cannon read his speech President Roosevelt stood at his right hand, giving close attention to the address.

Mrs. Roosevelt, surrounded by her children, Kermit, Ethel and Quentin, stood facing Mr. Cannon, almost in the center of the crowd.

President Roosevelt shook Mr. Cannon's hand heartily at the conclusion of his speech, and then mounted the chair to deliver his address in response. He was given so cordial a reception that it was quite a minute before he could proceed. He was in excellent voice, and though he followed the printed text of his speech, he seldom referred to it. The address was punctuated by applause.

The visitors then assembled on the lawn and the group was taken by a photographer.

A HARD FIGHT FOR LIFE.

A Man Attacked By Two Prize Bulls In a Car.

Syracuse, N. Y., July 28.—Eugene Mills, an employee of a stock farm near this city, has had a hard fight for life with two prize bulls, and but for the timely arrival of his employer would have been killed.

The animals were in a box car, preparatory to being shipped to the St. Louis exposition, and Mills attempted to tighten the rope on one of them. The bull made a rush at the man, and, striking him in the chest, knocked him down. Scrambling to his feet, he tried to escape, but was met by the other animal.

Mills was again knocked down, and would have been gored to death had not his employer, hearing the commotion and cries, come to the rescue. He beat off the infuriated animals and dragged the man from the car. A physician found that Mills was badly cut about the head and probably internally injured.

ACCIDENT BULLETIN.

There Were 79 Passengers and 840 Railway Employees Killed.

Washington, July 28.—According to the accident bulletin, issued Wednesday by the interstate commerce commission, there were 79 passengers and 840 employees of railroads killed, and 1,590 passengers and 10,854 employees injured in accidents on railroads in the United States during the quarter ended March 31, 1904. This is a decrease of eight killed over the corresponding quarter last year. The amount of damage to railway property caused by accident during the quarter, was $2,256,447. The bulletin says that the increased use of the airbrake, diminishing the necessity for employees on top of trains, has made a reduction of 32 per cent. in the number of persons falling off cars.

FIRE IN THE STOCKYARDS.

Swift's Lard Refinery Was Burned, Not Incendiary.

Chicago, July 28.—Wednesday fire broke out in Swift's lard refinery in the stockyards a mile from the entrance. Flames burst from the upper stories. The fire engines found great difficulty in making a way through the crowds. The flames raged for about an hour, but were kept from surrounding structures, though showers of sparks fell. Naturally the rumor spread that the fire was the result of incendiaries, but this was later declared emphatically to be erroneous.

GAS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

An Ingenious Method Employed to Make It.

Washington, July 28.—An ingenious method employed in the Philippines to secure an adequate gas supply is reported to the bureau of insular affairs by the Philippine bureau of government laboratories. This scheme is to slowly feed coconut oil, a product, into strong cast iron retorts after the latter are brought to a red heat in furnaces. This produces a very high quality of illuminating gas, free from smoke and tar.

HE RAN AMUCK.

The Antics of a Man Who Was Seized With a Fit.

Philadelphia, July 28.—Seized with a fit, Joseph Heiser went on a rampage through Andalusia, on the Bristol pike. He frightened a little girl to death, terrorized the barroom of the Red Lion inn, smashed furniture at his home, and ended by throttling a motorman on a passing trolley car, who finally succeeded in overpowering Heiser and turned him over to the police.

A NIGHT SURPRISE.

Japs Made a Daring Attack on a Large Russian Force.

The Latter Were Driven From Their Fortified Position—Japanese Had Only 800 Casualties—Russian Losses Not Known.

Chefoo, July 27.—A junk, bringing Chinese refugees from Port Arthur, has just arrived here. The Chinese report that when they left Port Arthur, July 22, heavy fighting was going on both on land and sea. They were unable to give any details. They report that the Japanese have heavily fortified Sanchinpo hill.

St. Petersburg, July 27.—A rumor is current here that Gen. Samsonoff was severely wounded during the fighting at Ta Tehe Kiao.

Tokio, July 27.—The Chinese flag is flying over the customs house at New Chwang. It is reported that the Japanese took the Russian position at Ta Tehe Kiao Monday night at the point of the bayonet.

Tokio, July 28.—In a daring night attack against a Russian force estimated at five divisions with 100 guns, Gen. Oku succeeded in driving the enemy from their strong line of defense south of Ta Tehe Kiao. Advancing on Sunday, Gen. Oku found a superior force confronting him and that a heavy artillery fire from the enemy was checking his men. He thereupon decided to hold the positions he then held and to attempt a night surprise. This was successful, the Japanese troops hustling the Russians into retreat to Ta Tehe Kiao. The Japanese had only 800 casualties. No estimates of the Russian losses are given.

The Takushan army did not participate in this fight, it being located to the east of Ta Tehe Kiao. Moving to the northwest this Takushan force fought and won a separate action on Friday, July 22, at Panling, losing 31 men. The commander of the Takushan army charged that the Russians violated the Japanese flag which they hoisted in an attempt to deceive the Japanese after which they fired a volley into the Japanese ranks. The Russians left 14 dead at Panling.

The Japanese began the advance against the Russian positions south of Ta Tehe Kiao on Saturday, July 23. On this date the vanguard occupied positions in the vicinity of Chui-chiatun, to the southeast of Ta Tehe Kiao, developing the position and strength of the enemy. The position of the enemy was fortified. The strongest point was at Taiping mountain, to the southeast of Ta Tehe Kiao and here the heaviest force had assembled. The Russians had two battalions of artillery posted near Changanon, due south of Ta Tehe Kiao and ahead of the main line. The Japanese deployed to the westward from the vicinity of Chui-chiatun and, confronting the Russian line, began the advance at an early hour on Sunday morning. At 9 o'clock the Japanese right had reached a bluff a little less than two miles from Taiping mountain. In the afternoon the Russian batteries, posted in various positions on the heights, opened with vigor, shelling the advancing Japanese line. The strength of the Russians gradually developed during the day and Gen. Oku estimated it at five divisions and 100 guns. The Russian fire prevented a general advance and determined Gen. Oku to decide to await the advance of darkness to deliver a night assault. Two divisions of Russians occupied the Saicheng road and Gen. Oku took the precautionary measure of engaging this force with artillery. The Russians replied with artillery and the duel lasted until darkness.

Suddenly at 10 o'clock Sunday night the entire Japanese right was hurled against the first Russian position east and west of Taiping mountain and easily captured it. At midnight the second position was attacked and by daylight the Japanese occupied the eminence to the east of Shanchiatun. The Russians were in retreat toward Ta Tehe Kiao. At 7 o'clock Monday morning the Japanese seized Cheny-shishan without resistance and pursued the Russian force toward Ta Tehe Kiao.

WAR INSURANCE RATES.

A Heavy Increase on Vessels Bound For the Orient.

San Francisco, July 28.—Referring to the war insurance rates of vessels from this port for the Orient a prominent broker said Wednesday: "Twenty per cent. is asked on the Korea, and so far as I have been able to ascertain, something like $30,000 has been placed at these figures. On the Mongolia, which leaves here on Friday, some insurance has been placed at two per cent. and Wednesday about $20,000 more went out at 3 per cent. The rate on the Shawmut took another rise and about $50,000 went on her Wednesday at 10 1/2 per cent."

Indeterminate Sentence Law.

Lansing, Mich., July 28.—In an opinion filed the supreme court holds that the indeterminate sentence law, enacted at the last session of the Michigan legislature, can not apply to offenses committed before it took effect.

Russian Vessels Destroyed.

A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality, and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

Healthy Mothers.

Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughing violently and exhibiting all the symptoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child, when Dr. Boecher's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the house—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectoration easy, and gives instant relief and refreshing rest to the cough-racked consumptive. New trial bottles, 25c; large size 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

THE COURT HOUSE MUDDLE.

Charges and Counter-Charges—Deplorable State of Affairs.

A nice muddle is the new Court House affair as it now stands.

First, Gibson & Crawford served notice on the Building Committee that the piers and girders were not sufficiently strong to carry the load the specifications called for.

The Building Committee then employed two experts to come here and make an examination, which they did Monday and reported that the piers and girders are safe beyond question, full report of which is below.

Then comes Architect Milburn and serves notice on Building Committee that Gibson & Crawford are not first-class and competent men, etc., and advise them to fire the contractors at once.

Then comes Superintendent Minter with a communication to Milburn.

Then, to wind up things for ten days at least, comes the Building Committee with a notice to Gibson & Crawford telling them if they do not get a hurdle on themselves in the next ten days they will be removed from further duty and their sureties be looked to for damages, etc.

Now, isn't this a pretty muddle. Mr. Gibson says he has nothing to say at this time, but still contends that he is right and that he had no chance to point out the defects he claimed, as he was out of the city the day the experts were here. We are in sympathy with the Building Committee, for we believe every member is trying to do the best for the county as Superintendent Minter, but they have been unfortunate, in our opinion, in getting mixed up with a bad architect and a bad contractor. As a man, Milburn may be all right, but as an architect we do not believe he ranks with the best. As a man, we believe Gibson, the contractor, cares only for self interest, and if he said he did not care if the building fell down two minutes after he was done, he is no man at all, but as a builder we believe he understands his business.

We are afraid the examinations made by the gentlemen the other day is not satisfactory to the public. It is claimed by many that Gibson should have been the one to point out to these gentlemen the defects and not Architect Milburn or his representative. Not that Mr. Min-ter did or would in any way misrepresent anything to the experts, far from it, but Gibson should have been given every chance to have made his statement good, and then if he failed, he should have been fired bodily.

Only one suggestion—so as to satisfy beyond a doubt the public on this matter let the Committee employ Mr. Sam Neely, a Paris boy, an expert civil and mechanical engineer, who has been in the employment of the Government for the past five or six years, who is now here, to make an examination of the defects pointed out to him by Gibson. We believe this would do more to forever settle this question than anything that has or could be done. It is quite a serious matter, and a few more dollars spent now might mean a saving of thousands—then too, you would satisfy a dissatisfied public as it now stands.

The notices and reports filed in the matter are as follows:

REPORT OF FAIG AND EID.

PARIS, KY., July 25, 1904.
MR. J. WILL THOMAS, Chairman Court House Building Committee, Paris, Kentucky.

DEAR SIR.—Acting under instructions from your committee, we have examined the stone and brick piers and steel girders in the new Bourbon County Court House, which were pointed out to us by your Superintendent, Mr. Minter.

We have calculated all of the weights which will rest on the said piers when the building has been completed, considering in every case the most unfavorable circumstances. The results of these investigations are as follows:

PLATE GIRDER.

The maximum stress in the top and bottom flanges at the center of the girder produced by all loads will be 13,900 (thirteen thousand nine hundred) pounds per square inch.

At the point where each girder supports the wall of the cupola, the maximum stress in the top and bottom flanges will be 8,160 (eight thousand one hundred and sixty) pounds per square inch.

PIERS.

The bearing pressure on the stone plinth under each girder at the cupola end will be 272 (two and seventy-two) pounds per square inch.

The bearing pressure on the stone plinth under the girder at the Bank Row end will be 170 (one hundred and seventy) pounds per square inch.

The maximum pressure in the piers at the level of the sills of the windows of the first floor, assuming that the entire weight of each girder is supported on the shaded portion of the section of the piers shown in the figure will be 134 (one hundred and thirty-four) pounds per square inch.

CONCLUSIONS.

The stresses and pressures which will exist in the girders and piers when the building has been completed as given above, are so well within the safe limits ordinarily used in construction, that the said girders and piers, in our judgment, are safe beyond question.

From our study of the drawings submitted to us and of the building as it now stands, we have no hesitation in saying that the design and proportions of the structure are excellent, and that great care has been shown in the superintendence.

MILBURN'S REPORT.

PARIS, KY., July 26, 1904.
MR. J. W. THOMAS, JR., Chairman Building Committee, Bourbon County, Kentucky.

DEAR SIR.—I beg to call your attention to the fact that Gibson & Crawford, contractors for Bourbon County Court House, are neglecting to supply sufficient material and competent, skilled mechanics and have violated their contract in many ways. They are not now nor have they at any time pushed the work with promptness. They are now putting in patched stone, which was prohibited by order of the County Court, and as agent of Bourbon county, employed as architect to see that the contractors furnished the proper material and workmanship, I do hereby certify that the county should serve notice on the contractors and their bondsmen, as provided for in Article V of the contract.

I think that the contractors' neglect and refusal to comply with the plans and specifications are sufficient grounds for Bourbon county to take action as they deem best, as provided for in the latter part of Article V of the contract, dated September 27, 1902. Said contract required the contractors to finish the building on or before January 1, 1904. There is no evidence now, that can be seen, that they will have the building completed by next January.

I have never regarded Mr. Gibson (who has been in charge of the work) a first-class and competent superintendent. While he is a brick mason and may be competent to look after that particular part, he is not well informed on other branches of the work. He has not shown by his actions the proper spirit and interest he should have in having the work done first class. I do not believe that Gibson & Crawford intend to have the building finished soon. I furthermore believe that the county will have a lawsuit with them, and in order that the county may get the use of their building and the proper protection for their records at the earliest day possible, I think bondsmen should be called on to complete the work. I believe the county is taking a risk in allowing Mr. Gibson to continue in charge of the building, and I hereby protest against his having anything to do with the work and take this method of putting myself on record.

Find attached report of Mr. Geo. B. Minter, Superintendent in charge.

Yours truly,
FRANK P. MILBURN.

MR. MINTER'S LETTER.

PARIS, KY., July 25, 1904.
FRANK P. MILBURN, Esq., Architect, Paris, Kentucky.

DEAR SIR.—As superintendent of erecting the new Bourbon County Court House, and having been placed here to protect the county's interest in seeing that the plans and specifications are complied with, I wish to report that the contractors, Gibson & Crawford, have failed in many respects, and refused to correct defects in work, after their attention have been called to same, and disregard the specifications, and pay no attention to me when I call their attention to the defects variation. The work has been neglected from time to time, and they seem to make no special effort to push the work to an early completion. In my judgment it will be necessary for the county to take some action in the matter. I am also of the opinion that Mr. Gibson is incompetent, and a dangerous man to have charge of the work, and care not whether the county gets a good job or not, all he wants is to collect the money, and at various times he has openly stated to me he did not care whether the building fell down two minutes after he was done.

Respectfully submitted,
GEORGE B. MINTER,
Superintendent.

SENSATIONAL NOTICE TO GIBSON & CRAWFORD.

PARIS, KY., July 26, 1904.
To GIBSON & CRAWFORD, a firm composed of Jordan E. Gibson and Isaac N. Crawford:—

You are hereby notified that Frank P. Milburn, Architect of the Bourbon County Court House, has certified to the Building Committee of Bourbon County that you are neglecting to supply sufficient material and competent, skilled mechanics on the Bourbon County Court House and have violated your contract in many ways; that you are not now nor have you at any time pushed the work with promptness; that you are now putting in patched stone, which was prohibited by order of the Bourbon County Court; and that your neglect and refusal to comply with the plans and specifications are sufficient grounds for Bourbon County to take action as they deem best, as provided for in Article V. of your contract of date, September 27th, 1902. A copy of the certificate of said Milburn is attached hereto as a part hereof.

You are therefore notified that, unless you supply a sufficiency of properly skilled workmen and of materials of proper quality and prosecute the work with promptness and diligence within ten days from this date, Bourbon County will exercise the option reserved in Article V. of your said contract and terminate your employment as Contractors for said work, and will enter upon the premises, and take possession, for the purpose of completing the work comprehended under this contract, of all materials, tools and appliances thereon and will employ other persons or persons to finish the work.

Are Still With Us.

Burglars are still doing good business in our city. It is beginning to look like they are residents. On Wednesday night, they entered the residence of Morris Hutsell, colored, on Limestone Avenue, and after chloroforming Morris helped themselves to two pillow slips, a lot of feathers, lace curtains, a watch, and $4 in cash which they took from his trousers pocket and then threw them back over the fence into the yard.

Inspecting Waterworks.

Dr. M. Dills, Taylor Mathers, Frank Kennedy, John Frey, Wm. Dorsey and James Hillock, a crowd of representative citizens of Carlisle, was in the city Wednesday. They were on a tour of inspection of a number of waterworks plants in several of the neighboring cities. They will visit Winchester, Richmond and Lancaster before returning home. Carlisle surely needs a waterworks system and we should think it would not be a difficult matter to pipe the water from Licking, only six miles away.

Runaways Run Over.

Jim Jackson and Forrest Washington, both colored and aged respectively 14 and 15 years, ran away from home several days ago landing in Winchester. They started on the return trip Tuesday night and becoming tired crawled under a car on side-track at Bedford's Station, near Paris, to rest. An early freight on Wednesday backed into the siding and mashed the boys up in a terrible manner. Washington's right leg was cut off above the knee and was otherwise injured and is considered in dangerous condition. Jackson was not so badly hurt, still his injuries are painful and he will be laid up for some time.

The boys were brought to Paris on an early train Wednesday and sent to their homes in Kennedysville, and were given every attention by the L. & N. surgeons, Drs. Fithian and Daugherty.

LATER.—Washington died Wednesday night at 7 o'clock.

Bourbon's Wheat Yield.

Wheat is being hauled in right along to our dealers at 90 cents a bushel. We are informed that there is an unusual amount of smut in this year's crop. Some of the fields that were about to be plowed up have yielded 25 bushels to the acre. An estimate made by a buyer who has purchased from all parts of the county, gives the general yield from 22 to 25 bushels. The highest yet reported was Judge H. C. Smith 42 bushels and Sidney G. Clay 40 bushels to the acre. There was large number of fields in county plowed up, yet the number of bushels will reach 250,000, the state as last year, or maybe 300,000. Rye is yielding from 25 to 30 bushels to the acres.

Lilleston-McGrath.

Mr. Lewis T. Lilleston and Miss Annie McGrath, both of this city, were married at the beautiful suburban home of Dr. and Mrs. D. D. Eads, on Penn avenue, on Tuesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock. Elder Carey Morgan, in a beautiful and very impressive ceremony, bound the two loving hearts together for life. The wedding was quite a surprise to the many friends of the contracting parties, as they had well kept their secret. Only a few of the most intimate friends were present.

The bride is the handsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McGrath, who on Wednesday moved to Lebanon to make their future home. She is a most estimable young lady and very popular with a host of friends.

The groom is a son of 'Squire and Mrs. Selby Lilleston, an energetic and hustling young business man, and worthy of the fair prize he has won.

May their married life be one of uninterrupted happiness is our wish.

A Good Game of Ball.

The best game of base ball played in Paris this season was the one Wednesday afternoon between the Paris team and the Versailles boys. The game was an exciting one and hotly contested. The only runs made was in the third inning when Versailles made 4, and in the sixth when Paris made 2. Paris had good chance to win the game in the seventh inning, when the bases were full and no one out, but they failed to turn the trick. The features of the game were the double play of Frank Cooper, first-baseman of the Paris team, and the brilliant line catch of Terrill in second. The Versailles team is a good one, and several brilliant plays were made by them. Cooper for Paris, pitched another excellent game, striking out fifteen men. Paris made 9 hits and Versailles 6.

The All-Collegians, of Covington, will play Sunday and guarantee to play better ball than the Cincinnati Grays. This club claim that they have always beaten the above club, and if this be the case, we may expect to see a first-class ball game.

Purnell-Terry Announcement.

The announcement has been made of the marriage of Dr. Julius M. Purnell, of this city, and Miss Edith Terry, of Louisville, which will take place next Thursday morning, August 4, at high noon, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Moss Terry, 2125 Third avenue, in Louisville.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Reverdy Estill, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in the presence of the relatives only, and the couple will leave immediately afterward for California.

Dr. Purnell, who is the only child of Mrs. A. T. Forsyth, of this city, has only recently returned from the Philippines, where he has been on duty as contract surgeon in the United States Army for three and a half years. He is handsome and popular, and a good specimen of Kentucky manhood.

Miss Terry is the only daughter of Mr. J. Moss Terry, secretary and treasurer of the Sinking Fund and chief licenses inspector, of Louisville. She has a charming voice and a most attractive presence—elements on which she depended for her success in light opera. She made her debut in Boston under the name of Marion Parker, and played there for a season, afterward going to New York with the company for a short engagement, which was cut short by the illness of Miss Terry.

Miss Terry's engagement to Lieutenant Samuel Sayre Rodman, of the navy, was announced a few months ago, and the story of how she met Lieut. Rodman was one of romance. Her approaching marriage to Dr. Purnell will therefore be of even greater interest.

The wedding will be witnessed by only the family and relatives.

Let every Democrat in Bourbon county make an effort to be present at the convention which is to be held in the county court room on Tuesday, August 2, at 2 o'clock. It is to send delegates to the Appellate District Convention at Lexington, on August 4, to nominate a candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals. It is conceded beyond any doubt that Bourbon county is for Judge Cantrill, but let our people show that they are for him in earnest by attending the convention and sending a delegation to the district convention that are for him first, last and all the time. He will probably get the nomination on the first ballot, and no worthier or more gallant Democrat could be honored by his party than Judge James E. Cantrill.

State Democratic Committees Meet.

The State Democratic Executive and Central Committees met at Frankfort Tuesday for the purpose of organizing, election of a secretary, the selection of a campaign committee and the settlement of any contest which might come before it. General Percy Haley was unanimously re-elected secretary, which position he has held for the past five years. The campaign committee selected by the State Central Committee is S. W. Hager, chairman; Ollie M. James, John B. Brashear, M. Lassing and Henry B. Hines. The committee recommended to the Governor for appointment as State election commissioners the names of Charles B. Poyntz, of Mason; Dr. John R. Collier, Louisville; Ben V. Smith, of Pulaski, and June W. Gayle, of Owen.

As Mr. Gayle was nominated by Judge Lassing, who was recognized as the spokesman for the administration, it is believed that he will be named by the Governor in place of Mr. Poyntz, the present commissioner.

Judge Cantrill Leads.

With the near approach of the Judicial convention to be held in Lexington, August 4, and at which the selection of a candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Appellate District is to be made, the friends of the three candidates are making an effort to create a greater interest in the work of the convention than has hitherto been manifested.

There will be 182 votes in the convention, making 92 necessary to a nomination. Of this number Judge J. E. Cantrill will enter the convention in the lead with 70 votes to his credit, Judge Saffly 53, and Judge Carroll 33. Twenty-six are doubtful. There is likely to be a warm contest in Owen county between Cantrill and Carroll forces, and in Jessamine between Saffly and Cantrill. As far as the other counties in the district are concerned, they are practically instructed, or at least pledged to one candidate or the other. The initial struggle will come with the county conventions, which are to be held August 2, to elect delegates to the district convention. Following are the counties which each candidate now appears to be reasonably certain of carrying:

For Judge Cantrill—Bourbon 12, Fayette 21, Franklin 15, Scott 13, Woodford 9, Total 70.

For Judge Saffly—Boyle 8, Garrard 7, Lincoln 9, Madison 15, Mercer 9, Rockcastle 5, Total 53.

For Judge Carroll—Carroll 9, Gallatin 5, Henry 12, Trimble 7, Total 33.

Doubtful—Owen 17, Jessamine 8, Jackson 1. Total 26.

THE DUSKY NIGHT.

How better than the radiant, golden day
I love the dusky, still, mysterious night,
When twilight, slipping down the starry
way,
Unfolds her somber curtain 'gainst the
night;
And troops of purple shadows softly steal
Through dewy haunts with velvet-shodden feet.
Armed with their silver lances that reveal
With luminous radiance their dim retreat.
I love the scented silence, when the flowers,
Sensuous and sweet, with heavy drooping
heads,
Distilling perfume through the lonely
hours,
Are sleeping in their dewy garden-beds;
And all the jeweled sky is bending low
Over the earth, its watch and ward to keep.
In azure depths its censers swing and glow,
Their golden lights reflected in the deep.
I love the soft, dark mystery that conceals Night's hidden things within its shadowy
way,
While whispering voices stealthily reveals
The trust of gnomes that vanish ere the day.
I love the rune and rhythm of midnight
winds
Harping weird anthems in their mystic flight—
Ah, yes, far better than the radiant day,
I love the somber, dark, mysterious night.

HE WAS straight, and grizzled, and

and fought, and gambled his way through the lawlessness and passion of the state's early life into the decency and uprightness of a successful contractor.

His name was Bill Bowen.
As a civil engineer, I came more or less in contact with him, and rejoiced in the largeness of his mental mold, as well as in the business sense of security
he let me enjoy.

One summer's night we took a drive to a distant town on the San Joaquin river. We were to look at stone for bridge building, and the blistering heat of the day made us willing to lose our sleep for the more comfortable traveling by starlight.

The horses jogged lazily through the coarse, thick dust on the river's levee, and the insects from the grain fields and the frogs from the sloughs had things wholly to themselves until Bill suddenly interrupted.

"Mrs. Chase is pretty enough yet to understand why she sent two fellows to the devil, isn't she?"

"What are you talking about?" I answered.

"Oh," said Bill, pulling himself up, "I forgot you didn't struggle with the rest of us through those groggy days."

I knew Bill enough to let him relapse
just so many minutes; then I said:
"Judge Chase's wife is lovelier at 60 than most girls at 16, but I hadn't any idea she figured so romantically in the early days as to send anybody overboard."

"H'm," replied Bill, reflectively.
The horses traveled on without attention, and I waited in patience.

"You know what it was like," he began at last. "Men with guns from all over the union and gold the heaven we sweated for. Prayers, and court, and the gambling tables all running under one roof, and nary a woman's face showing up in the mass to give us courage.
To be sure there were vixenish ribs o' Satan who robbed, and killed, and drank with the worst of us; but until
'51 we'd never the woman for reverence.
Then, by degrees, the lawyers and a stray merchant or two alured their families, but things wasn't dizzy till, pretty Grace Blanchard got out with her father."

"Understand, she carried herself as she'd ought to; but, understand, there was men among us as was born and bred to live with blood. The mass of us had to take our satisfaction in looking at her; but for two the favor in old Blanchard's eye was easy reading, and it wasn't long seeing the course the straw took."

"New Emory was a long, lean, blonde fellow, with a bladed fine face, and a way that made friends of the toughest.
They said he looked a swell when he called at the Blanchards', but I never saw him but like the rest of us—redshirted and overalls, and an angle to his pistols than made him a joy."

"George Stokes—'Shorty,' we called him—was a man with an answer that ripped like a knife, and a head that made success of everything, because it could work crooked as well as straight.
He'd been on the bench, but he'd located a vein at Mariposa, and was overseeing up there in '52. Naturally, he lost opportunities, not being right on the spot, and the danger began."

"The Blanchard house was swelled larger than most of the cabins, and had two long windows that opened onto a porch. Things might never have been so bad but for those two lidless eyes in front."

"One fatal night Shorty Stokes rode into the settlement—but I'm getting ahead of affairs."

Bill tossed his cigar into the tules, and hurried the horse into effort as the interest of his reminiscence swept him on.

"The girl carried herself after the fashion of high-steppers, and neither fellow could swear where he stood. It was laughter and spirit for both of them, they said, and nip and tuck for the yielding. The pace was the sort that exhausts men, and Shorty's brain for lawyering cooked up a scheme for his rescue. He was for their going together some night before her, and after a formal marriage proposal, each argue his claim and fitness for ten minutes by the clock, their honor at stake to stand by her decision."

"It got about afterwards that Emory wouldn't consent till he saw the devil to pay in Shorty's earnestness, and they swore with their fists in each other's to carry the thing through to the finish. The date and hour were arranged for the following Sunday night
at eight, and they drank to it with gall in the cup."

"When the evening came the clock had already struck eight when Stokes reached the Blanchard house."

"The lights from the room fell over the porch, and from the shadow of the steps he saw the something that in all the world he could not bear to see—
Emory crossing the room to take Grace Blanchard in his arms; Emory with passion paling his face and Grace Blanchard in the beauty of a disturbing humility."

"He cursed as he watched them cling to each other, and he cursed his way back to the saloons and his Mariposa mining."

"The next day he turned up again in the settlement, with liquor enough aboard to put a wheel in the head, and after a losing fling at the tables, he started to find Emory."

"After a little ineffectual riding, he leaped from the back of his vicious-eyed piebald at the corner that bulged thickest with saloons, and stood close to the stirrup with his hand on his hip. Some one who noticed him said his face
had the steely intensity of a razor edge."

"Then out of the crowd, unconscious,
with the music of love in his heart, swung New Emory. His hat was pushed back on his fair hair, and he was whistling the overflow out of his veins."

"In one instant a bullet rang through the air, followed by another. Emory fell in his own blood, and a horseman was riding off wildly and safe through the shower of bullets that rained around him. Every man with a cayuse tore in pursuit, but they only brought back eight half-dead horses. Stokes had staked relay beasts at different points along the road, and was then safe in the chaparral canyons toward the north."

"The gambling dens choked up with the crowds; gold-dust was heaped on gold-dust for the reward of the cowardly hound. Murderers weren't rare then, but there was only one New Emory, remember."

"Four of us wouldn't drop the search.
We let the blood-money men get out of the way, and then we worked as we'd toll for only our own."

"There was scarcely any scent to follow, for Stokes had bribed the greasers who furnished his horses; but we forced our way along on nothing. Day and night we rode with our eyes open, sometimes bullying and sometimes begging.
It began to seem hopeless. The days were running into summer again."

"One afternoon, toward twilight, we rested on the crest of a mountain where the path took a sudden turn away from a 200-foot precipice."

"We were torn with the snapping branches of the greasewood, and full of extremest dirt and disgust. Suddenly we heard the rustle of a step on the fallen leaves. Under a live oak, not 30 yards away, on the very edge of the cliff, stood Shorty Stokes. He had not heard us, and he stood looking at the moon
which hung a sickle in the hot sky.
The evening star was showing."

"The four of us were like stones. He could go to Guinea before motion'd have come to us. Then, simultaneously with our steps forward, he turned and looked into our faces."

"It was a moment to test the nerve of any man. He stood it as we were used to seeing him face all things."

"I suppose I'm the man you're after," he said.

"He said it with the dignity of a parson."

"In a second he had thrown down his pistols. He unsheathed his knives and dropped them to the ground."

"Take me," he said.

"Four of us looked into the unflin-ing clearness of his eyes. As we hesi-tated he spoke again."

"Listen. It is not in excuse that I speak, nor in weakening. It is to tell you that those among you who are men will follow my steps under like circumstances."

"Emory gave me his hand and his oath, in the manner of his frankness, to stand by an arranged agreement."

"We were to meet at eight o'clock on that Sunday night. A—beautifully good woman was to decide on our argument, which man she would marry. In riding to meet my engagement I happened on an accident. Within half a mile of the settlement, close onto time, my piebald went back on his haunches and the groan of a man came up from the roadside. I found an overloaded miner, hurt in the leg, and the hope in my own heart aroused my sympathy. I mounted the man on my beast and headed him back toward camp."

"Walk as I never walked, I reached the meeting place three minutes late. Ah—God—out in the darkness I saw Emory taking advantage of the delay."

"None of you is so much a cur as to let the life run in a man who, under his honor, couldn't yield a rival three minutes' grace."

"But, with the camp against me, and Emory the friend of the sorriest, I couldn't face the music when the justice was done."

"It is not mercy I ask. It is life hereafter. Come."

"With a common impulse, we started forward, only to halt in a frozen horror
as Stoke's broncho threw up his head in alarm to watch with us the backward somersaulting of his master's body over the precipice."

"Though there was but one verdict, even Chase said as we rode down over the mountain that night: 'Emory might have given Shorty a few minutes' grace.'"

Instead of insisting on reaching Tokio
the Russians now consider themselves lucky to land safely. In any small town they may be convenient.

Nukualofa, Friendly Islands.—It has become such a habit among travelers to talk of southern hospitality that one might believe it to be indigenous to the soil or an attribute of sunny skies and dusky cheeks.

If this were indeed so, then the farther south we go the more hospitable would grow the land, till the equator would be the culmination of this most pleasing trait, and the Friendly Isles would come by their name by in order of sequence.

cle revolves about him and each particular host vies with his neighbor in lavishing good will and good cheer upon the lucky stranger that is within their gates.

Straying along the winding paths,
through shadowy, overhanging palms, banana and bread fruit trees, it is without a start that one feels soft fingers creep into his hand and hears a cooling voice bid him Talofa.

Tiny brown elves, peep, wide-eyed,
from every nook, while scattered amid the tangled bush, one tiny thatched hut fit for a fairy bower.

None of the squalor of poverty is ever known among these communists. What is mine is thine—all have in plenty of the good things of the land. Water is the nearest friend, so dirt and personal un-cleanness are practically unknown.

Catching sight of the wanderer the inhabitants of the little community will call from the huts, waving beckoning hands and proceeding, if you turn to enter, to don a few more garments, out of regard for the peculiar notions that white people seem to have. With an arm thrust carelessly through the sleeve of a mother Hubbard, the main portion of which hangs down behind, a dusky, dove-eyed maiden advances to take your hand.

As you stoop to enter the cool, shaded dwelling, beautifully-woven mats are thrown on the floor, and upon these you are expected to sit, and pass the compliments of the day.

patched to procure coconuts from one of the groves that sways its foliage over the little home, and fresh bananas and oranges are proffered.

you, and many are the invitations to

If you are of an enterprising spirit,
the subject of trade is one easily opened in any assembly. Beads, shells, strings of bright beads, mats of all kinds and as different in price as in value or probably much more so, and much good-natured barter takes place when the nimble shilling is on the wing, for the language that money talks is easily translated even into the South sea island tongue. But the mercenary spirit, the looking upon the occasional traveler as fair prey for unscrupulous bargains is unknown in this fair land. What is if not, well and good, but in any case, you must accept their courtesy, their

HOW TO RECREATE AT HOME

The Same Benefits to Health May Be Obtained That Cost Very Dearly Abroad.

At this season of the year, the average mortal instinctively longs for the cooling breezes of the seashore or the invigorating air of the mountain-side, or, at least, some change from the daily grind of the ordinary occupation, and vast multitudes throng to popular watering places, until, says Good Health, existence at these resorts frequently becomes almost unendurable.

The unsuitable dietary, the apparent necessity to keep up conventional methods of living, often prompts the apparently fortunate individual to long for the unobtainable—an opportunity to be natural.

After all, the greater portion of our population must necessarily remain at home, but if they would put forth one-half the effort to utilize to the utmost extent the opportunity to secure an additional installment of health and recreation at home that their wealthy neighbors expend in seeking at a distance, they might be even more successful.

If one maintains a proper poise while walking up a well-ventilated stairway, daily, the entire year. In his own home,
it certainly ought to accomplish more for him than he could secure, from indulging in a few weeks of excessive mountain climbing away from home.

A well-kept resolution to drink a much larger quantity of pure water than attempting to strain through the system an excessive quantity of brackish water from the mine's spring, even if the mind is laboring under the delusion that such water can in any way be more beneficial than which it is sparkling, wholesome and pure.

Sleeping out of doors in a hammock
under the trees in the back yard affords as great health possibilities as are to be found in fighting mosquitoes while attempting to sleep in a tent on the edge of a marsh, no matter how famous and popular its name. When one is thoroughly determined to take some general application of cold, daily, be it a bath, a wet sheet rub, or even an ordinary cold sponge bath, he will eventually accomplish far more in the development of a sound, healthy physique and a strong nervous system than can possibly be secured by a few weeks' bathing even in famous waters, when the same treatment is practically neglected for the remainder of the year.

The temporary physical uplift, which is all that the average individual acquires from a summer outing in favorable climates, is more than counteracted, a few weeks after he has returned home, by the unfavorable climate created within him by using an unnatural and unwholesome dietary; and, when his jaded nerves begin to utter their vigorous protests, sympathizing friends console him with the fact that he is being overworked. If he would only include in his daily programme a vigorous, sensible and scientific cultivation of that which is the most valuable in this world, next to character—health—he would secure an abundant harvest of the same.

The Sand-Clay Roads of the Southern States

When Properly Constructed They Have Shown Great Durability Under Heavy Traffic

IT IS a matter of common observation that here and there in the southern states are to be found stretches of sand-clay roads never known to be bad. This fact has led to a study of the reasons why such roads are always good. Numerous experiments have been made with varying results, but all indicate that the essentials to success in sand-clay road

Clay mixed with sand to the point of saturation, the angular sand grains being in contact.

building are puddling and saturation. What is meant by puddling, or mixing, may be clearly understood by anyone familiar with the operations in the process of brickmaking. The clay must be rendered homogeneous, and this can be done only by the addition of water during the process until the clay becomes plastic like dough. The second essential is the addition of sand to the point of saturation, but not beyond.

SAND CLAY ROAD IN SOUTH CAROLINA. It Has Been Used for Five Years Without Repair.

Let it be clearly understood at the outset that no sand-clay road can satisfactorily withstand the severity of public travel without having first been reduced to a compact homogeneous mass of sand and clay. Each grain of sand should be in touch with other grains on all sides, such a condition cannot be secured without the agency of water. It is useless to roll a dry sand-clay road before it has been rendered homogeneous by the puddling process and the grains of sand have been brought into contact, with only the interstices between them filled with clay as a binder. The first operation is mixing; the second is rolling as the mixture dries. This forces the particles of sand together, and any excess of clay tends to rise to the surface, rendering it sticky. This clay must in turn be sanded and the operations repeated until the surface has become hard and compact.

Many failures have been made in the building of sand-clay roads, and a few of the more common causes of these failures will be pointed out.

The first cause of failure is the want of perfect drainage. The imperfections may be in the cross-sectional drainage, the side ditches, or the drainage of the subgrade or roadbed. It is customary to give to a sand-clay road a little greater crown than is usually given to a macadam road, especially where the grade is above three per cent. The subject of side ditches should have more careful consideration than is usually given in case of macadam roads. If the subsoil upon which the road is built is clay, it is important that the bottom of the side ditches should be 18 inches or more below the crown or middle of the traveled track. If, on the other hand, the land is rolling and the subsoil is sand of considerable depth, thus giving perfect natural drainage to the roadbed, little or no side ditch will be required. Perhaps the most common error in drainage is the failure to drain properly and thoroughly all places where there are wet-weather springs. If necessary, the roadbed must be changed so as to locate it upon dry ground, as even the deepest side ditches practicable may fail to give relief where such springs exist. It is important to avoid deep cuts and to carefully consider all probable sources of trouble.

Sand clay mixture with not enough sand, the grains not being in contact.

Another cause of failure is the want of thorough mixing. There may be a proper amount of sand, and clay may be placed upon the road, yet if it is not thoroughly puddled and mixed to saturation in every place the road is not likely to withstand public travel. Some sections will break and become loose sand, while others will become muddy in wet weather and hard in dry weather. Such variations may occur every few feet and even at the same place, one wheel track being in loose sand and the other in mud.

In northern sections frost is another cause of failure, and one more difficult to deal with than any heretofore mentioned. Frost is temporarily destructive to a sand-clay road, and for that reason the mixture must extend below the frost line if the road is built on a clay foundation. Freezing disintegrates the sand-clay composition and makes of it a soft, slushy mud, which, however, repacks again after each heavy rain, although frequently leaving the road surface somewhat rough. Therefore, in general practice it is necessary to make the sand-clay mixture of such a depth as to extend a few inches below the frost line.

Failure is sometimes due to the kind of sand selected. None except sand made up of angular grains is adapted to sand-clay road making. Sand with grains which are worn off round, or sand which has been ground up by the action of wheels or water until very fine, is unsatisfactory and often worthless. The use of such material should be avoided, as a perfect bond cannot be effected, and the road cannot resist the rolling action of wheels, the tendency being much the same as when pressure is applied to a mass of marbles. Care should always be taken to select the sharpest and cleanest sand that can be found.

Unsatisfactory sand-clay mixture, the sand grains being worn round.

Other causes of failure are the improper selection of clay and the improper treatment of the clay used. Ferruginous clays are the best, and chalky clays, as they are commonly known, are the poorest for road-building purposes. Some clays have a large percentage of sand to begin with and require less sand, while as a rule the chalky (sedimentary) clays have very little sand, or very fine sand, and are more difficult to get fully saturated with sharp sand so as to become unyielding and homogeneous.

Another cause of failure in the use of this particular clay is the fact that it rarely has iron enough to cement or bind the material together; hence it is easily broken up and washed away or blown away as dust.

THE FRESH GROCERYMAN.

Tried to Get Solid with the Pretty Cook While Working for an Order.

"Cherries is ripe," said the groceryman, producing his order book and sinking into the kitchen rocker with a sigh of content. "Fresh picked from the tree, sound in wind and limb an' free from vice. Want some?"

"Who told you you could sit down in that chair?" demanded the pretty cook, relates the Chicago Daily News. "Nobody," replied the groceryman, "but it looks easy. I was tol'ble sure I could do it if I tried. The hard work'll be to get up again. How's the girl this fine chilly summer mornin'?"

"What girl?"

"You, loveliness."

"See here," said the pretty cook, "you're too fresh to keep. What are the cherries worth?"

"Thirty-five a box."

"Keep 'em!"

"They're worth that, but we've got 'em marked down to two boxes for a quarter. Full quart boxes; six of 'em would come near fillin' a gallon measure. Tradin' stamp with every box. Say, Evelina, didn't I see you a Sunday afternoon in the park in a blue hat?"

"I went out in the country a Sunday afternoon."

"Well, I seen some girl in a blue hat. I was drivin' in my ortermabubble an' I couldn't stop, but if it had be'n you, an' I hadn't be'n in a hurry, I'd a' give you an invite to take a ride. How many cherries do you want?"

"You can bring me a couple of boxes if they're any good. If they ain't you'll have the pleasure o' takin' 'em back. Would you like a piller for your head?"

"Don't trouble," replied the groceryman. "It's kind o' you to offer, but I can't stay long, anyway. I jest thought I'd run in an' see if there wasn't nothin' I could do for you. Honey?"

The pretty cook gave him a look of scorn and indignation.

"I say we've got a lot of white clover honey. I know you don't need sweet'nin', but it might do for the fam'ly. Eighteen a box. No? Well, you say somethin', then. Laundry soap—Mother's Marvel—washes the most deliket fabrics 'thout crockin', shrinkin' or runnin' down at the heel. Eggs? Fancy pedigreed eggs—real shell—no celluloid imitations. Matches?"

"You may bring me two dozen eggs and a can o' bakin' powder, half a dozen lemons an' two pounds o' coffee."

"Goin' to make coffee cake?"

"Never you mind what I'm goin' to make. Oh, and I want butter. Two pounds o' butter an' a couple o' bunches o' sparrergass. I guess that's all. Was you in the park, honest, a Sunday afternoon?"

"Sure thing. And there was a girl in a blue hat there, too. I wouldn't string you, Evelina."

"Don't you think you're smart?"

"I wouldn't be to blame if I did. Most everybody else does. So you think that will be about all, do you? Say, the nex' time you make a date with me, an' don't keep it it'll be because I've lost my memory, I tell you those."

"Well, I was there," said the pretty cook. "You wasn't, though."

"Come off."

"I was, honest."

"Well, I missed you, then. I stayed around for—"

There was the sound of a footstep beyond the inner kitchen door, and the groceryman jumped hastily out of the chair and began to write in his order book. "Cherries, eggs, bakin' powder, lemons, coffee, butter an' sparrergass," he repeated in brisk business-like tones as the lady of the house entered. "That all? Thank you."

CLAIMED BY MONASTERY.

First Male Child Must Be Trained in Priestly Mysteries in Tibet.

Every Thibetan family is compelled to devote its firstborn male child to a monastic life. Soon after his birth the child is taken to a Buddhist monastery, to be brought up and trained in priestly mysteries, says Cassell's.

At about the age of eight he joins one of the caravans which travel to Lhasa. There he is attached to one of the local monasteries, where he remains as a novice until he is 15, learning to read the sacred books and perform the religious rites of his faith.

The firstborn sons being thus "sent into the church," as we should say in this country, the second sons become the heads of the families and marry.

Unlike some other semi-civilized races, these young Thibetans have the right of choosing their own wives. A Thibetan girl, too, cannot be married off by her parents without her own consent.

The curious custom in regard to the eldest sons results, of course, in nearly every Thibetan family acquiring the odor of sanctity by numbering a monk among its members.

Odorless Flowers.

The majority of flowers have no perfume whatever. A chemist, who has for some time been making researches into the subject, declares that, out of 4,110 varieties known and cultivated in Europe, scarcely 400 have any odor, and of these nearly 50 have an odor which is, if anything, disagreeable.

High-Prized Card.

Two thousand seven hundred and fifty pounds have just been paid for a single playing card, a nine of diamonds. Upon the back of it Holbein had painted an exquisite miniature of Frances Howard, duchess of Norfolk.

Information Wanted.

She—I hear you're engaged to one of those young girls you met at the beach. Is it true?

He—Certainly. Which one?—Philadelphia Press.

Maple Ice Cream.

Make a custard of three pints of milk, one cup of white sugar and the well-beaten yolks of five eggs. Moisten half a pound of maple sugar and boil until it candies. Stir into the custard and when cool and ready to freeze, add one pint of whipped cream and the beaten whites of the eggs.—Boston Globe.

Good for the Throat.

Gargling the throat every morning with cold water not only cleanses the throat, but is a good preventive of sore throat and taking cold.—Medical Talk.

BIT OF WEDDING CAKE.

There Was a Charm About It Which the Young Man Proceeded to Investigate.

"But what shall I do with it?" he asked, helplessly. "There's a certain inanity in treasuring another fellow's wedding cake. Won't you take it—as a gift?"

"Thanks, no," she answered, relates Smith's Weekly. "The charm is broken if you give it away."

"Charm?" he echoed. "What charm has an infinitesimal piece of cake?"

"De you mean to say," she interrupted, solemnly, "that you have never tried the charm that lies in a bride's cake?"

"Never!" he averred.

"Then you must try it before you are a night older," she said, with a pretty air of authority. "Cut a card into seven slips and give me a pencil, and I'll do the rest."

"Now," she went on, "I shall write a name on each of these six pieces and leave one blank—for bachelorhood, you know. Then you will place them under your pillow, with the wedding cake, and draw out one each morning; the last one—with a pause of emphasis.

"I understand," he broke in. "The last shall be first. But I can't think of six names; one is so indelibly written on my heart that—"

"Oh, I can arrange that!" she interrupted blithely. "You know they must be written by someone else anyway—a disinterested person."

"Oh!"—humbly.

But as he watched her brows wrinkle in such perplexity he concluded that it was not such a bad thing after all this idea of tying up wedding cake in boxes, and he became convinced that weddings, on the whole, were not such a bore when he saw the ubiquitous best man peer into the half light of the verandah and retire precipitately.

"There's one thing I forgot," she added "each slip must be destroyed as it is drawn out, and only the last one read."

"Humph! Strict requirements, these! It would give a fellow some satisfaction, perhaps, to know whom he had escaped."

"Oh, but the charm won't work unless you do! Promise, now," she added imperatively.

And he promised. Then—

"Oh, I say," he cried, interrupting the writing again. "You'll put your own name down, won't you?"

"Shall I?" she queried doubtfully.

On the eighth day thereafter she received the following telegram:

"You name seventh. Has charm worked?"

And it was not till their honeymoon was at its zenith that she told him—confidentially—that each bit of cardboard had borne the same name, and there had been no blank.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.

Little Items of Domestic Lore Compiled for the Convenience of Housewives.

Cornstarch is recommended as a most effective agent for the removal of grease.

Candle shades are almost exclusively of beadwork, the silver and opalescent effects being the handsomest.

If the lamp chimney resists all efforts to make it bright and shining by the use of water, try a little alcohol.

Knives and forks not in general use will keep bright and rust free if lightly rubbed with olive oil before they are put away.

Sponging woodwork with water in which a generous quantity of alum has been boiled is said to be an excellent method of keeping away obnoxious insects.

Lunch clothes for bungalow or country home fitted up with rustic or mission furnishings are made of coarse linen in gray or tan shades, with borders in some gay, contrasting tone.

From across the seas comes the information that if a piece of flannel or cotton wool be well saturated with turpentine, kept moist and hung up in a room, flies will give the apartment a wide berth.

Since the shirtwaist has become a dominant feature in the feminine wardrobe, the question of the proper laundering of the washable variety is an important one. The tubable shirt waist can most certainly be marred if not made in the laundry, and therefore a special board, which is said to facilitate the ironing of shirt waists, comes as a boon.

A laundry device that is as inexpensive as it is helpful, is a zinc sprinkler that distributes the water evenly over the clothes. Competent laundresses claim that even sprinkling is essential for good results in laundrying.

Cherry Pickles.

Take large cherries before they are ripe enough to be soft, and put them, stems on, into jars of stone or glass. Heat the jars in hot water, and pour over them a sirup made with a pint of vinegar to every three pounds of sugar. Tie in a piece of cheese cloth a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice and cloves. Drain off the liquid and heat to boiling point every morning for a week. Pour it while hot over the cherries, which must be kept in a cool place, a dark cellar or sealed in cans. If a more acid pickle is desired use half the amount of sugar.—Washington Star.

Maple Ice Cream.

Make a custard of three pints of milk, one cup of white sugar and the well-beaten yolks of five eggs. Moisten half a pound of maple sugar and boil until it candies. Stir into the custard and when cool and ready to freeze, add one pint of whipped cream and the beaten whites of the eggs.—Boston Globe.

A Beautiful Young Society Woman's Letter.

ST. PAUL, MINN.
521 Wabasha St.
Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.,
Dear Sir:

"I took Peruna last summer when I was all run down, and had a headache and backache, and no ambition for anything. I now feel as well as I ever did in all my life, and all thanks is due to your excellent Peruna."—Bess F. Healy.

The symptoms of summer catarrh are quite unlike in different cases, but the most common ones are general lassitude, played-out, tired-out, used-up, run-down feelings, combined with more or less heavy, stupid, listless, mental condition. Relish for food and the ability to digest food seems to be lost.

Skin eruptions, sallow complexion, biliousness, coated tongue, fitful, irregular sleep, help to complete the picture which is so common at this season.

Peruna so exactly meets all these conditions that the demand is so great for this remedy at this season of the year that it is nearly impossible to supply it.

Peru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring the drug habit.

Thousands of women suffer from pelvic catarrh and catarrhal nervousness and don't know it. If you feel fagged out, begin at once taking Dr. Hartman's Peruna. It will relieve your catarrhal affliction and all your organs will be restored to health. Buy a bottle to-day, as it will immediately alleviate your case.
